CUOCHI at John's Place - 2 impieghi SVEZIA

ID offerta di lavoro: 4913636

Welcome to John's Place! To the low, weatherly wooden house in the middle of Apelviken's beach So close to the ocean that the window glass is covered by salt water when the breeze is coming in from the west. In summer, the line between outdoor and indoor disappears when the terrace turns into a shady paradise under the tents. In the winter, the fireplace warms up beautifully, a castle fireplace from 1903. At John's, no trends are observed. The cosy atmosphere has been built during the 25 years that Dorthe Florin has owned the restaurant. Each lantern, each pillow, every stoneware plate, is carefully selected by Dorthe herself. That is how the style of John's came to be. Bit by bit, just like a lovingly decorated home. We offer you a fulltime position, 40h/week, from 1st of June until 1st of September. During summer we will have some training for our chefs and cooks in South African cooking to further develop our fine dining cuisine. Since Varberg is a very popular summer coast city and it is hard to find accommodation here, we will do our best to help you to find a place in order to work for us. EURES has connections with other restaurants in Sweden and if you like, there are possibilities to continue to work in Sweden when you finished your position at John's place. Write "John's Place" on your application. Interviews will take place in Campania next May. Postdoctoral Fellow in Integrative Physiology - 1 post DANIMARCA

OFFERTE LAVORO ESTERO

Job vacancy Id: 4802047

Background The Novo Nordisk Foundation Center for Basic Metabolic Research (CBMR) has been established at the Faculty of Health Sciences, University of Copenhagen to conduct fundamental research on metabolism (<http://cbmr.ku.dk/>). The center, which consists of five scientific sections and a number of international research satellites, was established through an unrestricted grant from the Novo Nordisk Foundation. The current position is in the Section of Integrative Physiology, headed by Professor Juleen Zierath. Project Description The overall aim is to determine the interaction between circadian rhythms and the metabolic response to exercise to define potent interventional strategies that can prevent insulin resistance and T2D. The successful candidate will work in a scientific environment that bridges several disciplines and complementary expertise in clinical medicine, exercise physiology, circadian rhythms, metabolism and gene regulation to ensure development of innovative strategies to improve metabolic health through exercise and nutrient interventions in people at risk or diagnosed with T2D. The aim of project is to determine the genomic response to factors impairing or ameliorating insulin sensitivity, under various circadian states. Cell system-based screening will be used to identify nutrient-contraction interactions on insulin sensitivity. Transcriptomic and epigenetic profiles in the various states of insulin-sensitivity will be assessed using RNA-Seq, whole genome DNA methylation, Chromatin Immunoprecipitation (ChIP)-Seq using histone marks of active and repressive chromatin states, as well as marks associated with active enhancer activity. Transcriptomic and epigenetic signatures will be computationally integrated to determine the genomic responses to contraction. Selection criteria PhD in Biology, Biochemistry, Molecular Biology or related sciences. Experience in chromatin immunoprecipitation, DNA methylation analyses (Bisulfite Sequencing, Reduced Representation Bisulfite Sequencing) and gene expression analyses (quantitative PCR, RNASeq or gene expression arrays). Excellent computing skills and Experience in handling deep sequencing or genome-wide data. Extensive experience in tissue or cell culture, preferably muscle cell and adipocyte culture. Background knowledge in epigenetics and cell metabolism. Track record in molecular biology, cell biology or regulation of transcription. Excellent written and oral communication skills. Demonstrated capacity for effective teamwork. Relationships The holder of the position will report to the Director of the Integrative Physiology Section (Prof. Juleen Zierath) and the Deputy Director (A/Prof. Romain Barrès). The holder of the position is expected to interact with staff at all levels, both internally and externally, regarding relevant research topics. Employment Conditions Employment will be as postdoctoral Fellow a time-limited 2-year project. Employment will be in accordance with the provisions of the collective agreement between the
